INTERESTS

- Teaching and Mentoring: Demonstrate your interest in developing innovative teaching methods, creating engaging course materials, and mentoring students to achieve their academic and career goals.
- Research and Scholarship: Highlight your interest in conducting impactful research, collaborating with other scholars, and staying current with the latest developments in your field.
- Curriculum Development: Mention your interest in designing and revising curricula to meet the needs of students and align with industry or academic standards.
- Interdisciplinary Collaboration: If applicable, discuss your interest in collaborating across disciplines to bring diverse perspectives to your work and address complex problems.
- Community Engagement: Express your interest in contributing to your academic community through service, such as serving on committees, organizing events, or engaging with local organizations.
- Professional Development: Show your interest in continuous learning and staying updated on best practices in teaching, research, and academic leadership.

PROJECTS

Audio Shop Management (UG)
Audio industrial management is primarily used for rental purposes and sales. This project aims to simplify our workload. By computerizing our system, we can easily retrieve data and information about audio cassettes or CDs

Machine Learning Algorithms (PG)
This project primarily focuses on database integrity. Verifying database integrity can be a challenging task, particularly when dealing with merged databases. Manual verification may struggle to find optimal solutions efficiently. This project offers an approach to achieve optimal solutions using various algorithms, resulting in time savings. We propose a perspective on database mining as the intersection of machine learning techniques and database technology's emphasis on performance. We outline three classes of database mining problems—classification, association, and sequence analysis—and argue that these problems involve discovering rules embedded in large datasets. We present a model and foundational operations for the process of rule discovery.

OAK EDITOR (M.Phil Dissertation)
The Oak Editor functions as an integrated tool for Java programming. Typically, Java programs are created using editors such as WordPad, Notepad, MS Word, MS-DOS editors, and vi editors. Compilation and execution of Java programs are performed in the command prompt.

Density Conscious Subspace Clustering for High-Dimensional Data(M.E)
Density-conscious subspace clustering for high-dimensional data involves discovering clusters from different dense thresholds in various subspace cardinalities using the DENcos algorithm and genetic algorithm.
